MIZRACHI IN AMERICA

The inglorious finale at the American Mizrachi convention last week was symptomatic of the general effeteness of the organization during the past few years.

In the dying moments the convention made a frantic effort to locate someone suitable for the office of president of the organization. No such individual was discernible. By way of compromise it was suggested that the duties be entrusted to a praesidium of three. But again the search for a triumvirate, whose combined shoulders might bear the burden, failed to reveal the desired persons. And the convention dispersed, without having filled any of the important executive offices.

The retiring executive had come in for continuous and unsparing censure at the convention. Its re-election was therefore out of the question. The president and secretary resentfully refused to accept nomination even for minor offices on the council.

The only hope of the convention was to persuade Rabbi Berlin, the president of the world Mizrachi organization, to remain in America for a year and function as president of the American organization. But Rabbi Berlin did not want to act as a last hope.

The expedient was finally resorted to of appointing Rabbi Berlin as temporary dictator with power to select officers as he sees fit. Presumably Rabbi Berlin will now insert a "want ad" in Gedaliah Bublik's paper (the Jewish Daily News, which is a sort of organ of the Mizrachi) calling for applications for the vacancies on the Mizrachi executive.

The proceedings throughout reflected the weakness and hollowness of the organization. The delegation consisted for the most part of moth-eaten, third-rate rabbis and minor clerics. They had no sense of organization, and no idea of programme or policy. They had left no constituencies behind them to give them weight and substance. They were present at the convention merely by virtue of their unshorn facial adornments, and the theological head-gear which they affect. All they knew was that in Rabbi Berlin and Rabbi Fishman they have two very clever tacticians who seem to be able to hold their own and gain their points at any gathering or convention.

The conference had no record of achievements to report. The organization had even been spared the exertion of running its own campaigns for its funds. It had managed to wheedle out of the general Zionist organization a liberal appropriation for its needs. The high spot of the financial report was the complaint that the Zionist organization had trimmed its promised allowance in the proportion of the collections to the pledges.

Representatives were present of two junior leagues purporting to foster the ideals of Mizrachi among the youth. But the two sets of representatives spent most of their time quarrelling and fighting, each claiming to be the only group entitled to the recognition of legitimacy. From their bickerings it transpired that neither had a following of any consequence. Their memberships were only a matter of scores, not even hundreds.

The ladies—may the Mizrachi God bless them—were present. They demanded rights in the form of representation on the executive.

MORE ABOUT CORPORAL PUNISHMENT IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

BY RABBI FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

We are more than pleased at the splendid reception our editorial of last week on the abolition of corporal punishment in the public schools received. Of course, those officially connected with the public schools, and who have sponsored the retention of the strap were not in sympathy with the editorial. But significant indeed was it to read the following statement of Dr. James L. Hughes, one of Canada's great educators and formerly superintendent of public schools in Toronto. "I most heartily endorse Rabbi Isserman in the stand he has taken in this controversy. Corporal punishment does more in the home and in the school to destroy the real character of the child than any other agent in the world." To us, personally, Dr. Hughes has said, "I have for sixty-one years been preaching for the abolition of corporal punishment in the school." Taylor Statten, Canada's leading boy worker, who has united boys' work among the various churches, and was for some time in charge of National Boys' Work Board heartily approved our position. Other men and women outside of the school system who work with children and are in touch with progressive educational methods have come out strongly in favour of the abolition of corporal punishment. At Pickering College, recently reorganized, all punishment of any kind has been discarded. When Mrs. Gruenberg, National Director of the Child Study Association of America, was in the city last year, we asked her at a public meeting her opinion about corporal punishment in the public schools, and she was amazed to learn that in a progressive city like Toronto this obsolete form of discipline should be maintained.

At Fort William, the whole question is being seriously debated by the Board of Education. One of the trustees at a public meeting pointed out the many abuses which the system led to. He pointed out how frequently corporal punishment is dependent on the whim or mood of the teacher. If she has been out too late the night before and comes to school tired and irritable the children will pay in agony for her dissipation.

We ourselves have submitted a questionnaire to about one hundred and seventy children who attend thirty-five public schools in the city. All reported that the strap was used. Almost all reported that girls as well as boys were strapped. Some reported being slapped, which is a violation of existing regulations. Many reported being strapped without the presence of an additional teacher as witness as the regulations require. Offenses for which pupils were strapped varied. Some of the reasons given follow: talking, cheating, fighting, throwing snowballs, chewing gum, incorrect spelling, not doing homework, for being late more than two or three times, for being reported more than two times. Children in the primary grades were strapped as well as older children. We want to call especial attention to the last few offenses—such as lateness and poor spelling. A child coming late to school may not at all be responsible for his lateness. The mother, the father, the home, any number of causes over which the child has no control may be responsible, and to punish a child for someone else's errors is not only unfair and unjust but is apt to

WEDDINGS

Batshaw—Tarshis

The marriage of Dr. Ann Tarshis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis S. Tarshis, to Harry Batshaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Batshaw, was solemnized Wednesday, January 18, at the home of the bride's parents, 187 Bloomfield Avenue. Rabbi Zlotnick officiated. Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Julian Amsell, of Boston, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tarshis, of Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Batshaw sailed for Bermuda, via New York, January 20, for their honeymoon. They will live in Montreal.

Luffer—Pedvis

The marriage of Anne, daughter of Mrs. M. Pedvis, to Isaie Luffer, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Luffer, was solemnized Sunday, January 15, at Bnai Jacob Synagogue, Rabbi Berger officiating. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Maurice Pedvis, wore a beaded georgette gown studded with rhinestones, made with rows of beaded fringe. Her veil of silk net was arranged with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of Columbia roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The maid-of-honour, Miss Eva Pedvis, sister of the bride, wore coral georgette with rows of beaded fringe, and a coral silk tulle hat and American Beauty roses. Nat Luffer, brother of the groom, was best man. The bridesmaids were Misses Sadie Brown, in pink georgette and lace, trimmed with rhinestones; Annie Luffer, coral satin and tulle, bouffant style; Lillian Bornstein, pink satin and tulle dress; and Ida Shiffer, in flame georgette. They all wore rhinestone headdresses and carried bouquets of Ophelia roses. The ushers were: Albert Pedvis, Pete Luffer, Henry Leopold and Hyman Lewis. Mrs. M. Pedvis, mother of the bride, wore a black lace gown over gold tissue, trimmed with a rhinestone buckle, and a corsage of American Beauty roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Mrs. L. Luffer, mother of the groom, wore a black chiffon velvet gown trimmed with metallic cloth, a black hat, and a corsage of American Beauty roses. A dinner of 200 covers was served. The out-of-town guests were: Mrs. William Conn, Miss Annie Luffer, Nat Luffer and Mrs. A. Harleg, all of New York.

Hubscher—Rubin

The marriage of Eva, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Rubin, to Joseph M. Hubscher, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Hubscher, took place Tuesday, January 17, at Bnai Jacob Synagogue, Rabbi Wachtfogel officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a period dress of white satin and georgette. Her veil of net edged with lace was held cap fashion by knots of orange blossoms on either side and she carried roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The maid-of-honour, sister of the bride, wore a beaded peach colour dress. She carried a bouquet of red roses. Hy Hubscher, brother of the groom, was best man. The bridesmaids were: Misses Freda Bordensky, in a white crepe romaine dress with skirt of petals; Leah Speigelblat, orchid lace gown; Esther Hubscher, green taffeta in bouffant style; and Rose Berlin, white crepe romaine dress with sequins. They all carried bouquets of roses. Groomsmen were: Abe Officer, Louis Hubscher, Sam Rockman and Mac Berlin. The flower girl, Shirley Hubscher, wore a frock of salmon crepe de chine and carried a basket of roses. Mrs. W. Rubin, mother of the bride, wore a black georgette satin dress trimmed with silver lace, with a corsage of red roses. Mrs. S. Hubscher, mother of the groom, wore a black georgette and satin dress trimmed with gold lace, with a corsage o roses. A reception for 300 guests was held. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Hubscher will live on Esplanade Avenue.

Corn—Schachter

The marriage of Miss Fanny Schachter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schachter, Fairmount Avenue, to Jack Corn, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Corn, was solemnized Sunday, January 15, at the Edinburgh Cafe. Rev. Julius Berger officiated. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore an ivory gown with bodice of metallic cloth and skirt of lace frills. Her veil of net fell from a cap of silver lace and clusters of lilies-of-the-valley. Her flowers were tea roses. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Toba Schachter, who wore a powder blue georgette dress trimmed with metallic thread. She carried American Beauty roses. Victor Gilletz, cousin of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Moe M. Schachter, Myer Berman, Colle Gilletz, and Samuel Bessler. Mrs. Charles Schachter, mother of the bride, was in black crepe romaine and lace with a corsage of American Beauties. She also wore a black satin and straw hat with drooping lace. Mrs. E. S. Corn, mother of the groom, wore a black georgette dress trimmed with lace, and a corsage of American Beauty roses. The wedding march and benediction accompaniment was played by Miss Mabel Corn, sister of the groom. A dinner of 140 covers was served. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Corn left on a trip to New York, Atlantic City and Niagara Falls. Going away, the bride wore a brown weasel fur coat, trimmed with Alaska sable collar, and a hat to match.

Pinchuk—Scutelsky

The marriage of Miss Alice Scutelsky to Archie Pinchuk, was solemnized at Annex Hall, January 15. Rabbi Rothblatt officiated. WORDS ARE CHEAPER THAN MONEY

Mr. Levin asked Mr. Nathan for a loan of $25.00. Mr. Nathan pretended not to hear the request. Levin repeated his words again and again and still Nathan made no reply. Mr. Levin became excited. "Say, Nathan, don't you understand? I am asking you to loan me $25.00. Why don't you answer me? I am entitled to an answer at least."

"Well," replied Nathan at length, "I would rather owe you an answer than to have you owe me $25.00."

RABBI STERN SPEAKS ON JESUS

"I believe that Jesus lived, and I am proud of the fact that he was a son of my people Israel." On this statement, made Sunday, January 15, by Rabbi Harry J. Stern, of Temple Emanu-El, at the Young Men's Forum, was hinged a discourse on "A Jewish View of Jesus," which was followed up by questions. This was the first of a series of lectures given under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. with a view to bringing before the public a greater understanding of Jesus. Col. Gerald Birks, chairman, in introducing the speaker, stated that it is the hope of the sponsors of the Forum that this search for truth may be aided by the lectures of the speakers which compose the varied programmes for the coming three months. He introduced Rabbi Stern as a brother searcher. Rabbi Stern gave his hearers a comprehensive insight into Judaism.

LODGE INAUGURATES LUNCHEONS

Maimonides Lodge of Montreal started the first of a series of weekly luncheons at the Hoffbrau Hotel, January 13, with an opening luncheon on the yohr-zeit of Maimonides. Rabbi J. L. COMMENTARIES

By Rabbi Harry J. Stern, of Montreal
Associate Contributing Editor

THE WORLD IS MOVING

Even in Montreal "the world is moving"! For the first time in the history of the local community a rabbi was invited to address an open forum meeting under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. The theme assigned to us was rather a delicate one—"Jesus." We pointed out that there is no official Jewish view on Jesus any more than there is an official Jewish view on Buddah. We showed that according to our thinking there is an historical Jesus, a legendary Jesus, and last but not least, a theological Jesus. The historic Jesus was a humble teacher and a minister to the poor and publicans, Jesus was a Jew and never severed his connections with Judaism. One need only turn to the twelfth chapter of the gospel according to Mark and find evidence of Jesus' faith in the God of his fathers. "And one of the scribes came, and heard them questioning together, and knowing that he had answered them well, asked him, "What commandment is the first of all?" Jesus answered, "The first is, Hear, O Israel: the Lord our God, the Lord is one: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. The second is this, thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these."

Jesus did not speak of God as a "trinity." As a Jew he believed in one God. Why should Christians find fault with Jews if they do not postulate the trinity? In this connection it is good to remember the declaration of Abraham Lincoln, "I have never united myself to any church because I have found difficulty in giving assent, without mental reservation, to the long, complicated statements of Christian doctrine, which characterized their activities of belief and confessions of faith. When any church will inscribe over its altar, as its sole qualification for membership, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy might, and thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, that church will I join." (Carpenter's Six Months in the White House.) Lincoln spiritually belonged in the synagogue.

And again the world is moving! For the first time in the history of the Jewish community the Reform rabbi addressed a meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary of the conservative congregation and the conservative rabbi spoke to the Sisterhood of the Temple! "Shecheyonu!" We sometimes speak of intolerance on the part of the non-Jew. But what about the "Rishus" between Jew and Jew? Yes, the psychical revolution has even touched Montreal. This revolution with the help of science and historical research is bringing open-mindedness to all of us. May we come face to face more often and then shall we understand each other. Otherwise Swift's sneer will hold good: "Most of us have just enough religion to hate each other."

AWAY WITH POLITICS

It seems to us that the Jews of Montreal have a moral obligation—they must find ways and means of building a Jewish hospital. The great trouble with many of our Jews is that they "play politics" and in Jewish community endeavour politics is bad business. A dynamic open-minded Jewish leadership is needed in this hospital venture. "Let us build" should become the motto of Montreal Jewry.

AARON SAPIRO TO LECTURE HERE

Aaron Sapiro, who sued Henry Ford for his attack on the Jews and on himself personally, will speak before the Y.M.H.A. Forum, January 31. Although Ford's retraction came through Louis Marshall, it was the Sapiro suit which created the publicity. A Canadian newspaper was sued by Sapiro for libel in connection with his personal activities in organizing the farm co-operatives. When Sapiro won this suit he stipulated that the newspaper use the funds he claimed for the education of a poor Jewish boy.

Forum subscribers will be given the benefit of this additional lecture without charge. Tickets are on sale until Tuesday, January 17, the date of the Fleischer-Calverton debate. Individual tickets at the Y.M.H.A. office.

AN INFORMAL INTRODUCTION

Moses Mendelsohn, the great Jewish philosopher, was once walking on a busy thoroughfare in Berlin, deeply engrossed in thoughts, and unintentionally he bumped into a heavy-set Prussian army officer. Mendelsohn hastened to apologise, but the officer became furious.

"Pig!" he shouted.

Whereupon the philosopher made a courteous bow, as if responding to a self-introduction, and said:

"Mendelsohn."

RUMANIAN RIOTS RESEMBLE RUSSIAN POGROMS

Further details of the outrages committed by the student hordes at Oradea Mare, Jassy, Cluj and other towns, indicate that these riots differed but little from the gruesome pogroms which took place in Russia before the war and which were carried out by the brutal and uncultivated peasants and cossacks. The Rumanian student has learned his lesson well and was able to improve upon his prototype in refinement of cruel details.

At Oradea Mare, five Jewish girls were kidnapped by the students and carried to the station Predeal, where they were made to drink whiskey and then assaulted. The girls are now in the hospital. Three Jews and two Hungarians were fastened with ropes to a running train, and when the rope snapped the victims were hurled to the ground, suffering fatal injuries. In Jassy, the Great Synagogue was invaded during services and thirty Jews were injured. Six synagogues were set on fire and the fact that the students had with them large cans of petroleum made it impossible to extinguish the flames. Much of the silver ornaments of the scrolls of the law were later found on Rumanian girl students, together with other articles stolen from Jewish homes.

The Rumanian Government endeavoured to minimize the reports of the riots and to whitewash itself of the guilt attached to it. To an interpolation presented in the Senate by Dr. Niemirover, Minister of the Interior Duca said that the Government regretted the riots, "which are likely to compromise Rumania's prestige abroad." Minister of Religion and Education, Lapedatu, declared that the Government would assist in the rebuilding of the destroyed synagogues, but added that the students were provoked to the riots by "agents provocateurs." The sum of $16,000 was appropriated to aid the Jews to rebuild the ruined synagogues, but the Jewish leaders regarded this sum as most inadequate and Lapedatu promised to endeavour to obtain an additional appropriation for the purpose. The Council of Ministers declared in an official communication that the chiefs of police in Oradea Mare and Cluj would be dismissed and that the rioters would be tried by court-martial without delay. Of course, of the 400 persons arrested, only forty-four are still in custody. Dr. Filderman, the Jewish spokesman in the Rumanian Parliament, issued a statement in which he declared that he was certain that the Rumanian authorities will punish all the guilty persons and make adequate reparations to the sufferers. A bill will be introduced in Parliament asking for an appropriation of eighty-eight million lei to pay for the damages done in the riots.

The Rumanian vice-consul in New York, S. Druzu, issued a statement in which he endeavours to throw the blame on the Jewish and Hungarian communities, who attacked the students who were gathered in conference and provoked them to conduct the demonstrations, which resulted in "a few windows and signs being broken and torn." On the other hand, Archbishop Osedariu of Oradea Mare declared that the "devastation of the synagogues which occurred on the day when I celebrated my seventy-fifth birthday anniversary is such a shameful outrage that it has shattered me." The Regency Council, now the supreme power in Rumania, declared to Dr. Filderman that it disapproves of anti-Semitic propaganda and that it regrets the present incident. A Jewish protest meeting which was to be held in connection with the day of fasting proclaimed by the Rabbis, was prohibited by the Bucharest police. It was disclosed that the conference of the students, just before the riots, adopted a resolution in which they pledged themselves to do all in their power to bring about a numerus clausus against the Jewish students in Rumania.

Editorial

For do not their sisters of Hadassah who are their counterparts in the general organization enjoy all manner of privileges in their circles—nay, do they not actually make and control the executives of the general organization? But the pious ladies of Mizrachi were gently reminded that—not as a matter of principle but merely as a matter of expediency—the place of Mizrachi women was not among men on executives, but among cooking utensils in kitchens.

There was a time when Mizrachi had a very significant role in the development of Zionism. Twenty-five or thirty years ago, the bulk of Jewry in eastern Europe was profoundly religious. The Zionist problem in its Herzlian political garniture was presented then. How did it square with the underlying nisus of their life? Was Zionism compatible with the idea of redemption as understood by traditional Judaism?

The majority of the religious Jews felt that modern Zionism was heresy. They refused to see in Herzl and his associates the accredited agents of providence. They could not tolerate the pretensions of heretics and modernists.

At this juncture appeared Rabbi Isaac Jacob Reines, the great rabbi of Lide, and worked out the synthesis of the beliefs of traditional Judaism with the modern doctrines of political Zionism. He created the Mizrachi organization which was to provide a congenial environment in which religious Jews might help Zionism without suffering offense to their religious sensibilities. Mizrachi was an agency for making Zionism acceptable to the not-inconsiderable constituency of ultra-orthodox Jewry.

Now in America there is no element in Jewry corresponding to the ultra-religious body in eastern Europe. The rank and file of the middle class which is professedly affiliated with the orthodox synagogue, has no religious scruples against accepting the modern Zionist credo. It regards Zionism as a nationalist movement and its reaction to it is social or political rather than religious. It appreciates that in the general Zionist organization the platform is broad enough to suppрt all people of moderate views.

The Mizrachi organization has therefore no basis for existence in America. It directs its appeal for support to the synagogue membership. But the synagogue membership, ostensibly religious, is quite content to move within the periphery of general Zionism. When addressed by Mizrachi it will lend a more or less respectful ear, but it will refuse to be drawn away from its comfortable roost in the general Zionist organization.

There is left only the clerical element which perforce must profess extreme piety. The professional clerics conceive it to be their duty to respond to the pietist exhortations of the Mizrachi leaders. They rally—perhaps reluctantly—to the Mizrachi banner. Can an organization built of such material be robust or enduring?

The Mizrachi organization in America is doomed to extinction. There are a few leaders at the head of the organization in Europe who are clever party tacticians. At congresses, by dint of adroit political manipulation, they contrive to put up an imposing front, and extort favourable conditions which help their party to continue its existence. But a party which consists only of a few leaders with a dummy following cannot expect its illusory existence to last very long. The farce enacted at the recent convention, is an indication of its enfeebled power, and augurs its speedy disappearance from the scene.—A. B. B.

A gift of $50,000 to the National Farm School at Douglastown, Pa., from Abe Erlanger, of New York, was announced by Herbert D. Allman, the president, at the annual banquet given the football team last Monday. Mr. Erlanger two years ago donated the Erlanger dairy barns, worth more than $50,000, to the school.

In Sydney, Nova Scotia, where there are 4,500 Christian pupils in the public schools and 260 Jewish children, the Jews are being excused from religious instruction every morning. The Christian pupils come to school at nine o'clock to hear Bible reading and to recite the Lord's prayer and the Jewish children are allowed to come in at 9.15 in time to escape these ceremonies. This new arrangement, arrived at last week through some commotion, seems to please every one except the Ministerial Association and possibly many Christian pupils who have begun to suspect that Jewish kids have all the luck.

The Ministerial Association, made up entirely of Protestant preachers, requested at the beginning of school in September that Bible reading and the Lord's prayer be introduced into the public schools. The Catholics agreed but the Jews objected mildly. A month later the ministers had the Ten Commandments hung in each school room with the consent of Catholics and Protestants, but over the strong protests of the Jews. Difficulties arising from this situation are considered ironed out now in the arrangement whereby any children may come to school fifteen minutes late without being marked tardy.

This plan may still be thought something less than perfect by exacting people who are never satisfied and don't consider the feelings of a hard-working Ministerial Association. They must be asking the usual questions as to why public school and religion have to be combined anyway, and why the Christian children can't hear the Lord's prayer and see the Ten Commandments hung up at home or at Sunday school and whether it is a wise and kind thing to make the Jewish children conspicuous from their fellows, and many more questions besides.

Among the still discontented are the members of the Ministerial Association themselves notwithstanding the achievement of the Lord's prayer recital and the increased visibility of the Ten Commandments. Perhaps they feel cheated out of the Jewish children but they only express the fear that the privilege accorded the Jewish children of coming to school late may encourage the Christian ones also to take advantage of the new rule that "any child may be fifteen minutes late." The preachers evidently mean the Christian children to have devotional services whether they want it or not as a duty, an obligation, no special treat. It would be surprising if the Christian children did not want to evade the devotions, for, if the Jewish children come in fifteen minutes late, why can't Sunday school be enough for them, too? On the surface, at least, the Jewish children don't seem any more lost to salvation than the others, hymns, prayers and Bible readings taken into account. The ministers may sniff and assume that if the Jewish parents object to having their children influenced by another religion, very well then perhaps they will live to regret it. But the Gentile children, expected to be there when the others are free, may suspect that there is no time like the present and that the Jewish children may never regret being absent anyway. Setting the Jewish children apart makes them feel conspicuous, of course, but it does something else, too. It will make the Christian children hostile to them and also to the ceremonies and the backers thereof and do more harm than good even from the viewpoint of the Ministerial Association. It is not a good arrangement.

In Atlantic City at a meeting of the National Council for Jewish Education a resolution urging public school authorities to shorten school hours so as to make room for religious training expressed opposition to "any form of religious instruction within the public school building during school hours." In Toronto in September at a meeting of the Anglican General Board of Religious Education, Rev. Dr. R. A. Hiltz, general secretary, "sounded a warning note," in regard to the necessity of the growing generation in Canada having a religious outlook. He said in part: "The state will see that these boys and girls are educated so far as the intellectual life is concerned. But can we be equally sure that the Church will see to it that they are taught the fundamental principles of true living? Without this their education will not only be incomplete but a menace. This can be prevented only by the church taking its full part in the promotion of religious education and seeing to it that every effort is made to build up our children in our most holy faith. Let us, as the Church's representatives in this great undertaking, throw ourselves into the performance of our task, knowing that it is only by placing the child in the midst that we can ever hope to build enduringly for the Kingdom of God."

Then the Committee on Religious Education in the Public Schools reported that an Interdenominational Committee, headed by Archbishop Williams, was working on the preparation of a series of graded Bible readings, graded scripture memory work and a selection of passages of Scripture suitable for use as a basis for graded moral instruction. The committee expected to have its task completed early in 1928. This is early in 1928, and the Jews are always interested in what develops when religious instruction in the public schools is the subject. —B.C.

Bohbeh Rochel's Maase

By GRETA BLOOMHILL, Rhodesia, S.A.

"I say, Grannie," said Leonard, who had been playing in a football match that afternoon, "Your gefüllte fish is unbeatable—scores goals every time against mother's." He had come home after the rest of the family finished dinner, and showed his sincerity by demolishing the contents of his plate.

"Greedy," said Ruth, watching him. "You'll choke if you eat so fast—he deserves to be punished for his greediness! Girls, what shall his punishment be? I think he should be made to go without gefüllte fish for a year."

"I say, have a heart!" pleaded Leonard in mock dismay. "A week's quite enough."

"I know of a boy who was much hungrier than you," said Bohbeh, "and who was made to go without his gefüllte fish for a year through no fault of his own."

"Who was the poor chap?" asked Leonard between mouthfuls.

"A little boy named Benjamin, who lived a hundred years ago," said Bohbeh. "His parents were very poor. Every Friday evening they had a treat, for their father used to buy a fish for the Sabbath meal. Benjamin's mother always made gefüllte fish, as it was more economical and went further than fried fish. Her gefüllte fish had the reputation of being the finest in the neighbourhood, and you can imagine how her large hungry family looked forward to the weekly treat. She had six girls and a boy, Benjamin, who was the hungriest of all. Every Friday night her brother used to visit them and add to the mouths that needed feeding. However, Uncle Isi never came empty-handed, but always brought some pleasant little gift, either of the sweet conserves beloved of that generation, or of some quaint toys for his nephew and nieces. Benjamin was his favourite, and he would spend hours in relating strange stories to him, or playing frolicsome pranks.

"This uncle was an extremely pious man. He had been a great Talmud student in his day, and never missed a B'racha. His wife had died and left him childless, and his greatest joy was on festivals and Friday nights, when he left his lonely home to join his poor sister's bright family circle, where happy children's voices and the sound of innocent prattle recalled his own never-to-be-realized dream children. How delighted the youngsters were when the Sabbath drew nigh!—the bright lights, their mother's week-day cares replaced by smiles, the fragrant smell of gefüllte fish, and best of all, Uncle Isi with a joyful face, a 'Gut Shabbos, gut Shabbos,' and some present or other for them all.

"On Shabbos they were awaiting him as usual, but he was late. His brother-in-law told them that he had not seen him at Shul, whence they used to come together. It was the first time within their memory that Uncle Isi had missed Shul, and at last, as he neither appeared nor sent a message, they concluded that he must be seriously ill. Benjamin's father accordingly went to find out, and Benjamin, who it must be confessed was rather a selfish little boy, and was quite unmoved by the general anxiety, cried for long-delayed gefüllte fish. He was very hungry, and the tantalizing aroma spread from the tiny kitchen over the two cramped rooms that were their home. But his mother only scolded him, and kept him walking from the kitchen to the door to look out for her husband's return. The latter was away for long over an hour. 'I can find no trace of Isi in his room,' he said when he came back at last. 'Everything is as usual—only his hat and his tallith are not in their place. No one knows where he is; the neighbours saw him go to Shul, but no one has seen him since.'

"'Have you notified the police?' asked his wife.

"'Yes, and they are searching the town. I fear there is nothing more we can do to-day.'

"There was sadness in the home that evening, and an atmosphere of gloom that, no matter how obtrusive their poverty, had never before obscured the glory of the Sabbath. The parents hardly tasted any food, but Benjamin, who was by now tearfully voracious, devoured both his own and his parents' share of the gefüllte fish.

"Early the next morning the father went out to make further inquiries. When he came back he had a little parcel in his hand—it contained Uncle Isi's hat and tallith, the only relics left of him, that a fisherman had found floating in the river at night. Though the police authorities were on the lookout for the dead man's body, all search seemed fruitless, for every trace of it had vanished."

"The week-days passed, and in due course the family found itself again on the threshold of the Sabbath.

"Sudden death and tragedy may cross our path, the finger of Nemesis may move, unforeseen catastrophe fall upon us, but the wells of life and sustenance must be maintained. And thus, though they could no longer hope for the presence of their welcome Sabbath guest, and though there was still a heavy depression over their minds, yet the father found himself at the fish-market as usual on Friday's noon. The fishers had just brought in the morning's catch, and as he passed one of the stalls, a great iridescent salmon leaped from the nets almost into his arms.

"'I will take this one,' he said, and paying for the fish turned his steps homeward.

"His wife took the fish and carried it into the kitchen. She laid it on the board, and as she raised her knife to despatch it, a heart-rending cry burst from its mouth and echoed through the house—'Sh'ma Yisrael!'

"She screamed and dropped the knife, while her husband, who had also been startled by the cry, ran into the kitchen.

"'Wos is dos?' he exclaimed.

"She was on the verge of fainting, but pulled herself together so far as to point to the salmon, which, through having been so long out of water, was now in the last stages of exhaustion. Her husband went closer to the fish and looked at it.

"'Good God,' he said, 'it was Isi's voice!'

"She nodded and wept silently, rocking her body backwards and forwards.

"Her husband quickly filled a basin with water and put the fish into it, but it was too late. The fish was dead.

"'I must go to the Rav at once,' he said, and hurried to get his hat.

"The Rav lived close by, and when he heard the man's tale he became very agitated. He threw off his slippers, his yarmelke, and his house jacket, and called for his boots, his hat, and his gabardine. When he saw the fish he breathed certain words over it, fluttered the leaves of a much-bethumbed holy book, and muttered into his payoth.

"'The fish is a Jewish soul,' he said at length. 'Some pious man has fallen into the river and his spirit has gone into the fish.'

"Breathlessly they told him of the remarkable resemblance which both had noticed in the fish's voice to the voice of Uncle Isi. The Rav nodded his head. 'A-vaddeh, a-vaddeh, it is he—none other than he. The fish must be laid out on the 'Tahare-bret' and washed, and given burial according to Jewish law, and you must sit 'Shiv'a' a whole year. In thanksgiving that you have been saved from the sin of eating your uncle's soul, neither you nor your children must touch any fish during that time. Then only will his 'neshomah' have peace.'

"Thus little Banjamin, much to his disgust, missed his gefüllte fish altogether that evening, and every Sabbath for a whole year. You can imagine, Leonard, how he enjoyed his first Sabbath meal when the year was over, and when, with many tears and great ceremony, and innumerable 'B'rachoth,' his mother again handed round portions of gefüllte fish.

The fish into which Uncle Isi's soul had gone was buried as the Rav had ordained, and never, within the remembrance of the people, was such a cortege known as that which attended its funeral. The wonderful tale was handed down from father to son, and to this day in the ancient Jewish cemetery at Vienna you may see a monument engraved with the likeness of a fish, and if you inquire of its origin from some of the oldest Jewish inhabitants, you will hear the same story that I have related to you this evening."

"Phew!" said Leonard, who had just finished making a hearty meal, "I can't eat any more. This story has spoiled my appetite!"

"I should say," remarked Ruth, pulling a wry face and wrinkling up her little white nose, "that after such an occurrence the family should never have tasted fish again for the rest of their lives."

Bohbeh laughed. "I think the rabbi also had a tender spot for little Benjamin," she said, "and that's why he made it only a year."

"Good old Rav!" said Leonard. "I doubt whether Geff would be so lenient with me. Anyhow, thank heavens such things can't happen nowadays!"—Jewish Forum.

The Executive of the Warsaw City Council asked of the Government to set aside three sites in the Jewish district of the city for the purpose of erecting three new Jewish schools. It is also decided on the school budget for the year, allocating sums of money to the various schools and kindergartens conducted under Jewish auspices.

The ballroom of the Nickle Range Hotel, Sudbury, Ont., was the scene of the wedding, January 10, of Miss Hattie Victoria Ironstone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Ironstone, of Sudbury, and Dr. Benjamin M. Kolber, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Kolber, of Montreal, Que. Rev. M. Kaplan, of Toronto, officiated. The bride entered the ballroom to the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin, played by Mrs. Harry M. Endleman, of Sudbury, accompanied on the violin by S. Cohen, of Toronto. Given away by her father, she wore a gown of white sequin with a train of silver cloth. Her veil of net hung from a pearl head-dress, and she carried a shower bouquet of white tea roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Her sister, Miss Sophie Ironstone, was maid of honour, in a bouffant gown of maize georgette trimmed with lace, and carrying a bouquet of maize roses. Bridesmaids were Miss Luba Kahan, of

EVERY ONE GOOD TO CHILDREN

Shaw Street Synagogue gave a bar-mitzvah party in the honour of Samuel Levine, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. M. Levine. Mr. Bohner, Grace Street, member of the congregation gave his home for the dinner. Members of the school have looked after the bar-mitzvah for the past four years and also after a younger sister. Sunday night, his aunt, Miss Dora Nepon, who the children call mother, gave a party and tables were laid for sixty. Miss Nepon has taken care of these children since they lost their parents, seven years ago. Mr. Ellenberg, toastmaster, and Mr. Epstein, also members of the school, gave the children money in Victory Bonds. Mr. Capple, the Hebrew teacher, made a speech. Miss Nepon thanks the Shaw Street School and frienda for their gifts and kindnesses to the children.

There is no Jewish candidate for mayor this year. Sam Pasis is in the fight for office of controller. In Ward Four, Alderman A. I. Grossman is running for re-election on his last year's record; "Buzz" Bossin, Maxwell King and Alec Dyment, who lost his election by the margin of six votes two years ago, are other candidates.

PURITY FLOUR

RECIPE FOR CHEESE BLINTZES

With a fork beat one egg, one-half teaspoon of salt, add one cup of water and one cup of sifted Purity Flour, beat until smooth. Grease a frying-pan very slightly with butter or oil, pour in two tablespoons of the batter, tilting the pan so as to allow the batter to run all over the pan. Fry over a low heat on one side only, turn out the semi-cooled cakes on a clean cloth with the uncooked side uppermost: let cool. Prepare a filling as for cheese kreplich, using one-half pound of pot-cheese, a piece of butter size of an egg, add one egg, pinch of salt, a little cinnamon and sugar to taste and grated peel of a lemon. Spread this mixture on the cooled dough, fold over and tuck the edges in well. Then sprinkle with powdered sugar and cinnamon, and fry in plenty of oil or butter. These blintzes are served hot.

June Days in Winter..

. . The problem of drying clothes in winter is solved by the introduction of the gas-heated laundry dryer . . . . Gas heat passed over the clothes has the same whitening action as the rays of the sun. . . . There is no danger of soot marks, or settling dust when the gas laundry dryer is used—the clothes being dried in a commodious enclosed cabinet. . . . The gas heat laundry dryer is a step saver as the clothes are hung up within the space of a compact cabinet. . . . Clothes pins and clothes lines are abolished. . . . The work of drying takes only half the time. . . . If you would like to see one of these dryers, call at our Display Rooms at 55 Adelaide Street East.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

WEDDINGS

Benstein—Jolofsky

The marriage of Miss Lillian Ida Jolofsky, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Jolofsky, to Edsel Benstein, only son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Benstein, of Windsor, was solemnized at McCaul Street Synagogue, Sunday, January 8, at 6 p.m. Rabbi J. Gordon officiated, assisted by Cantor B. Wladowsky. The bride, who was given away by her father and mother, entered to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, gowned in a white georgette frock, trimmed with Chantilly lace in bouffant style. She carried a shower bouquet of white lilies, roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Her veil of Chantilly lace, arranged cap fashion, was trimmed with orange blossoms and seed pearls. The maid of honour, Miss Eva Jolofsky, wore a green satin and silver lace dress, silver shoes and stockings, and carried a bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath. The bridesmaids were: Miss Tillie Jolofsky, in a blue satin and net dress; Miss Stella Weis, of Rochester, green and black taffeta; Miss Celia Gurwich, pink and black net, all carrying roses and baby's breath. Miss Leah Becker, niece of the groom, was flower girl; Abie Scher, ring-bearer and Dorothea Scher and Cynthea Barrett, train-bearers. The best man was Norman Ranm, and groomsmen were: Myer Nadler and Joseph Cohen, all of Windsor, and Jack Shayne, of Toronto. A dinner for the immediate family was held at University Avenue Synagogue vestry chambers. A reception for about 200 guests was held, Mrs. S. Jolofsky and Mrs. H. Benstein receiving, the former gowned in black lace over flesh satin; the latter in black chiffon velvet and silver brocade, both wearing corsage bouquets of roses. The couple will spend their honeymoon in New York, Atlantic City and further points, and will live in Windsor, Ont. The bride travelled in an ensemble of brown squirrel coat, dress, hat, shoes and gloves to match. Out-of-town guests were: Mrs. A. Nayles, of Carnegie, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. H. Benstein, Mr. and Mrs. J. Becker and daughters, Mrs. D. Summer, Mrs. Minus, Mr. Benstein, Mr. and Mrs. S. Meretzky, Mr. and Mrs. D. Meretsky, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Glanz, Dr. and Mrs. J. Cherniak, Mr. and Mrs. A. Solomon, S. Tolin, of Windsor, Ont.; Mrs. Rosenthal, of Detroit; Misses Stella and Rhea Weis and Miss Ida Markus, Rochester, N.Y.; B. Ziff and Misses Etta, Lillian and Roslyn Ziff, of Bridgeburg, Ont.

Mrs. Levy, Bathurst Street, announces the marriage of her daughter, Gertrude, to Albert Goldstein, to take place quietly Sunday, January 29.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pasternak, Palmerston Boulevard, announces the engagement of their daughter, Celia, to Dave Cadesky, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Cadesky, Borden Street.

BORN

January 8, at Wellesley Hospital, to Mr. and Mrs. L. Goldstein, 36 Standish Avenue, Rosedale, a daughter, Gloria.

Announcement

All notices under this head twenty-five cents per count line

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Sons of Jacob, extend to Mrs. D. Dworkin and daughter, their sincerest sympathy in their sad bereavement.

Mount Sinai Hospital Ladies' Auxiliary wish to express their grief and most profound sympathy to our president, Mrs. Dorothy Dworkin and daughter, Ellen, on their great loss. Mr. Henry Dworkin, beloved by us all for his fine personality and generosity of heart, will remain in our memory forever.

OBITUARY

The funeral of Henry S. Dworkin, who died Friday evening from injuries sustained in an automobile accident, brought a score of policemen, mounted and on foot, to the Labour Lyceum, Spadina Avenue, Sunday afternoon, to take charge of the direction of traffic which filled Spadina Avenue from Dundas Street north for two blocks with 15,000 persons. After a brief service at the home of his brother, Edward Dworkin, 133 Delaware Avenue, the remains were taken to the Labour Lyceum, of which Mr. Dworkin was a founder. There addresses were delivered by A. Kirshner, M. Kramer, Sam Esser, Abram Rhinewine, Morris Skutchkow and Rabbi Ferdinand Isserman, after which the doors of the building were opened to permit the crowd to file past the bier. Born in Europe, Mr. Dworkin came to Toronto in 1906, and a number of years ago established a steamship agency and tobacco business. He is survived by his wife; daughter, Ellen; one brother, Edward, of Toronto, and two sisters, Mrs. A. Judkin, of Toronto and Mrs. Hershorn, of Los Angeles, Cal. The service at the home was private and conducted by the societies of which Mr. Dworkin was a member. The pallbearers were: S. Esser, D. Kertzer, M. Rosenstein, J. Vaille, D. Teich and A. Kirshner. Here the gathering required the efforts of mounted and foot police to handle. Four hundred automobiles composed the procession from the home to the Labour Lyceum, led by the mounted constables. Among the members of the City Council and Board of Education who attended the service were Alderman Joseph Gordon, Alderman Nathan Phillips, Alderman Claude Pearce and Trustee Joseph Glass. Alderman Gordon spoke in the cemetery on Dawes Road, where the interment took place in the Sons of Jacob plot.

France, one of the few countries where there have been no vestiges of anti-Semitism in evidence for years now, is rather amazed to find within its confines a newly-formed body of Jew-baiting tendency. Ligue de l'Ordre is the name of this organization, which seems bent upon resurrecting all the antiquated charges of professional anti-Semites.

Three children of Mrs. Eliza Guggenheimer, widow of Randolph Guggenheimer of New York, share equally in the residue of her estate, estimated at more than $1,000,000, according to her will. Mrs. Guggenheimer was long active in philanthropic work and annually gave the newsboys' dinner on Washington's birthday.

create in the child an animus and bitterness which may later bear anti-social fruit.

Teachers who defend the system say that the strap is used in emergencies, but if the reasons given in the questionnaire are correct, these emergencies seem almost commonplaces. One newspaper reported that there were 7,400 such emergencies according to the records of the Board of Education in the schools last year. Seventy-four hundred strappings or thirty-seven a day counting two hundred days to the school year. There are altogether too many such emergencies, and either the strap is being used for purposes other than it was intended, or the teachers are failing in instituting discipline. In conferring with teachers, they have stated that when they were beginners, they used the strap more frequently than when they were more experienced, which means that young children were the victims of the teacher's inexperience and paid for her lack of knowledge of her profession.

Morally and spiritually, notwithstanding biblical verses to the contrary, corporal punishment is not defensible. The use of force to achieve moral ends with children seems to us immoral. The careful and conscious inculcation of fear into the child is a serious moral problem. It means that we are training our children into cowardice. It means that we are consciously attempting to destroy their courage. It means that we are reverting to primitive society when fear was the dominant element and factor in the lives of men.

To-day, love has supplanted fear. We speak more of the love of God and less of the fear of God, and our children should so be taught that they will love their teachers and not fear them. They should so be reared that they will do the good and the beautiful not because they are afraid but because of their irresistible appeal and charm. The beginning of religion may have been fear, but the aim of religion is to rid man of fear. Similarly the aim of education should be to teach love and to rid the child of fear. That children fear teachers who strap is so. University men reared in Toronto's schools have told us that at promotion time they dreaded being sent into classes where the teacher was known to be fond of the use of the strap and as one put it, "Where no one could escape."

The whole story of the education of man reveals a gradual substitution of love for force, of kindness for cruelty. We know the cruelties inflicted on children in the past due to man's ignorance and blindness. As we have improved our educational technique, we have been able to discard more and more the implements with which children were tortured. Our education has not suffered because teachers have been kind and considerate. Education to-day is infinitely superior to that of other ages: Discipline is better and much of its harshness has been eliminated. Education to-day seeks to develop human personality. It recognizes indeed the trailing clouds of glory about all children. It aims to develop the distinctiveness of each child. That can be done not by cold and chilling blasts of physical punishment or fear, but by the warm rays of understanding and sympathy. These should be the bonds knitting teacher and pupil—understanding and sympathy and not fear. The strap in the school is an anachronism. It harks back to dark periods in education. It encourages fear and not love, and its relegation to a museum of antiquated horrors would in the long run mean finer children and a nobler society. Toronto would be wise to ban it from the schools.

QUICK WORK

Ever hear the story of the heroic little tailor?

He was walking one day when he saw a fight. So he stripped off his coat, rolled up his sleeves, ran in, caught two swift slaps in the face and ran away. —"The Young Judean."

Theodor Fritsch, the leader of German anti-Semites and the translator of the Dearborn Independent articles, was sentenced to three days' imprisonment and to pay a fine of 300 marks on the charge of blasphemy brought against him by Jewish citizens. Frisch wrote an article in which he spoke of the Jewish God as a God of vengeance, who demands blood.

"Condition Up-to-Date in Poland," a report by Morris D. Waldman, delivered at the recent Constructive Relief Conference in Chicago, has just been published in pamphlet form.

POLISH JEWS PREPARING FOR COMING ELECTIONS

The election of a new Parliament, including both the Seim and the Senate, which will take place throughout Poland during the first week of March, is engaging the attention of all political parties and of the whole Polish nation. The minority groups, including the Ukrainians, White Russians, Germans, Jews and Lithuanians, are endeavoring to form a bloc, but this is approved only by the conservative elements among the minorities, while the Socialist groups, including the Jewish Bund and Poale Zion Parties, refuse to take part in the formation of the bloc. The Nationalist groups and the Government parties are trying to smash the bloc and are concentrating all their storm forces against its weakest element, the Jews. The recent attack on deputy Gruenbaum, a staunch supporter of the bloc, is supposed to have come from the Nationalist elements, constituting a threat against the Jewish minority. The Nationalist press is continually warning the Jews against such a step, threatening them with all kinds of punishments. If the Jews stand together with the other minorities, they will be able to secure their proportionate representation in Parliament. Should they choose to stand out of the minorities bloc, they will not only lose their representation, but will also be denounced as traitors to the cause of the minorities.

Within the Jewish group there are also many differences of opinion which threaten to split it up in several segments. While the Zionists in Poland proper, led by Mr. Gruenbaum, are committed to join the minorities bloc, the Zionists in Eastern Galicia, led by Dr. Leon Reich, declined to join it, preferring to go to the polls with a special Zionist ticket. Negotiations between the two groups have been going on now for a number of weeks, and recently Mr. Gruenbaum conferred with Dr. Reich in Lemberg, and the first report was that they arrived at some workable agreement. It was reported that the matter was placed before the Zionist executive in London for arbitration, but that body refused to take action, since the Zionist Congress decided that the executive was not permitted to interfere in local politics. As matters stand now, there will be at least three distinct Jewish blocs in the elections. The main Jewish groups allied with the other national minorities constituting the most important group; the Bund and the left Poale Zionists forming the Jewish Socialist group, and the Agudas Israel, combined with the Jewish Traders' Union, forming another bloc, in friendly relation with the Government. The Polish Government Party, which views with disfavour the formation of minorities' groups, regarding it as a danger to the State, expressed great satisfaction at the formation of the Jewish bloc by the Agudas Israel. It is expected that at least fifteen Jews would be returned during the coming elections.

The vigilance of the Warsaw police prevented an anti-Jewish outbreak on Christmas Day, which might have proved serious. During the services, when the St. Paul's Church was crowded with worshippers, a demented Jew, Jacob Diamant, entered the edifice, shouting "Revenge for the Rumanian excesses," and wrecked the altar. The chaos that ensued threatened to become very serious, were it not for the intervention of the officiating priests, who quieted the indignant crowd and appealed to them not to accuse the whole of Jewry because of the acts of an individual. The police also came at once and frustrated any attempt at attacking Jewish passersby by the excited worshippers. Diamant, who had escaped from his guardians, was found to have been demented and was taken to an insane asylum. It was established later that he had been a patient at the Jewish hospital for some time.

A number of conferences of various bodies have recently been held at Warsaw and Lemberg. The Tarbuth conference, held at Warsaw, was attended by 335 delegates coming from 200 different localities. Vladimir Jabotinsky delivered the principal address, and his presence in Warsaw was made the occasion of reorganising and strengthening the Zionist revisionist group in Poland. A conference of rabbis that was held at Lemberg ended in confusion when a long-standing feud between two Hasidic sects was renewed, and led to fist fights between the followers of the rabbis of Belz and of Bobowa.
